Catholic News.....

St. Teresa of Ávila's body remains incorrupt after almost 5 centuries. The Diocese of Ávila in Spain reported that the body of St. Teresa of Ávila, a doctor of the Church, was still incorrupt after her death on Oct. 4, 1582 — almost five centuries ago. “Today the tomb of St. Teresa was opened and we have verified that it is in the same condition as when it was last opened in 1914,” said the postulator general of the Discalced Carmelite order, Father Marco Chiesa of the Carmelite Monastery of Alba de Tormes, where the remains of the revered Spanish saint rest.

Pope Leo XIV has sent 5,000 doses of antibiotics to the Gaza Strip in a humanitarian gesture aimed primarily at children and made possible by the recent reopening of key border crossings allowing the entry of aid. According to Vatican News, the shipment of the medicines began this week, following the ceasefire and the start of the first phase of U.S. President Donald Trump's peace deal.

For the first time, the body of St. Francis of Assisi will be visible to all, from Feb. 22 to March 22, 2026. This religious and historical event was announced on the memorial of the saint of Assisi and will coincide with the eighth centenary of the death of St. Francis in 1226. In his homily, Cibotti emphasised the “newness of life” that Francis presents to the world. “A new way of feeling, of thinking, of living Christ,” Cibotti noted.

Anglican Bishop of London Sarah Mullally will become the first woman archbishop of Canterbury after her nomination was approved by King Charles III. Archbishop-designate Mullally will be installed as the Church of England's highest-ranking bishop in March 2026. That will formally make her the spiritual leader of approximately 85 million Anglicans living in 165 countries — even as the Anglican Communion's cohesion is under increasing strain from disagreements over teaching and practice on LGBT issues. In an Oct. 2 statement released on the archbishop of Canterbury website, Mullally said she wants to “respond to the call of Christ” in her new ministry with the “spirit of service to God” that has motivated her since her youth. “I look forward to sharing this journey of faith with the millions of people serving God and their communities in parishes all over the country and across the global Anglican communion,” she said.
