Thie Dy Vea Retreat House. - Great Book Give-away
Ballawattleworth House, Tynwald Road. Peel.

Over the years we've built up a fantastic little library of books. There's prayer, poetry, biography, spirituality, Celtic Christianity, the list goes on, written by a huge range of authors. We'd love it if these books could find new homes.

So we'd like to invite you to drop in on Friday 28th November between 10 a.m. and 12 p.m. Come have a browse and take home a book or two, treat yourself or a friend, any donation would be welcome. And whilst you're here why not have a cuppa and a piece of cake or a mince pie?

We look forward to seeing you.

Pope Leo XIV to moviemakers: Film can portray 'longing for the infinite'

Pope Leo XIV told representatives of the global film industry on Saturday that cinema is far more than entertainment, calling it a vehicle capable of expressing humanity's deepest spiritual search and its longing for the infinite. The pope received a group of filmmakers, actors, and producers at the Apostolic Palace on Nov. 15. Among those greeting him were Academy Award-winning Australian actress Cate Blanchett, American actor Chris Pine, Italian actresses Monica Bellucci and Maria Grazia Cucinotta, and Oscar-winning director Spike Lee.

Ahead of the audience, the Vatican released a list of some of the pope's favorite films, including "The Sound of Music" and "Life Is Beautiful."

Addressing the artists, the pope said cinema is "still a young, dreamlike, and somewhat restless art form" and that although it began as a "play of light and shadow, designed to amuse and impress," it soon began to convey "much deeper realities," eventually becoming "an expression of the desire to contemplate and understand life, to recount its greatness and fragility, and to portray the longing for infinity." He told them: "It is wonderful to see that when the magic light of cinema illuminates the darkness, it simultaneously ignites the eyes of the soul. Indeed, cinema combines what appears to be mere entertainment with the narrative of the human person's spiritual adventure."

One of cinema's most valuable contributions, he said, is "helping audiences consider their own lives, look at the complexity of their experiences with new eyes, and examine the world as if for the first time," thus rediscovering "a portion of the hope that is essential for humanity to live to the fullest."

He added: "I find comfort in the thought that cinema is not just moving pictures; it sets hope in motion!"
